

Elevator pitch to promote my school's educational policy

Hi. My name is Sotirios Christopoulos. I teach at Secondary Education. I am the one who invented "What I love" in 2014 as an inclusive educational tool:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iRnkgex0OKo> and reformed it in 2019 to potentially include all disciplines as well: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=E_yiVqwp_Ss Inclusive education at all levels has been the discussion for decades and this STE(A)M project offers the solution to this issue in one hand, while on the other hand being a cost-effective solution it releases funds instead of requiring more funds to be invested. This project reaches out each student and each teacher and makes the school community work together. It needs to be tied to the school life to have the desired result. It will be implemented throughout the school year. It will need from few hundreds to few thousands of euro to be implemented depending on the varying needs. Nevertheless, it can be implemented at no cost if funding is not possible. "What I love" might compete for the same resources from the inclusive education budget. It will only need a small part of the budget invested to inclusive education at the moment and will have a much greater impact.